FROM DETROIT TO THE GULF VIA CAIRO.

Mention has been made in these columns previously of the new route from Detroit to New Orleans, which has been opened up by means of the Cairo and Vincennes railroad and of the advantages which this line cannot fail to give to the two cities named as well as to Cairo. The distance from Cairo to Detroit by this route is one "hundred and twenty-five miles less than by the way of Chicago. As Detroit is one of the most important centers of trade for the Northwest and New Orleans "represents the trade demands and facilities of the entire Gulf 'region," it will be seen that the route which brings them in closer connection than any other is of vast importance to both and of no less importance to Cairo, as the terminus of the railway line on the North and the head of open water in the Mississippi at all seasons of the year. An effort is now being made by the merchants of Detroit to establish direct trade between that city and New Orleans, Mr. Wm. M. Burnell, secretary of the New Orleans chamber of commerce, recently wrote a communication on the subconsideration of that body,

We have space only for a part of the communication, that bearing directly upon the advantages which the Carro and Vincennes road, as a connecting link between Detroit and New Orleans, must bring to the two cities and the importance which Cairo assumes as a point of concentration for the commerce of the entire Northwest on its way to the Gulf, and from thence to distant and foreign ports :

The railroad system but recently completed has connected New Orients with Detroit, as you will see from a schedule accompanying this letter, by a journey via Louisville of only fifty-seven hours. Recently a line of travel and transports-fortable to-day. tion has been opened connecting Detreit with the Mississippi at Cairo. It em-ployee the Cairo and Vincennes, the Vinployes the Cairo and Vincennes, the Vin-cennes and Indianapolis, and the Wabash. Western and Toledo, railroads. You will see, therefore, that commerce has opened this way of communication. You will have steam direct in six days from Aspinwall, or in two and a half days from Havana, or three and a half from Vera Cruz to New Orleans. You will have targe transportation to Cairo, always open and adequate winter and out grades, fully difteen per cent shorter than that from New York. I cannot compare freights nor insurance, but both the coast route. The ocean voyage from Havana to New York is 1.250 miles—that to New Orleans about 650 miles. The on the inhoard than on ern roads and lines.

If these views shall induce your marchants to look to New Orleans as their port of communication with Spanish until it was raised—about a half hour.

I have seen that Montreal desires a line of steamers to Jamaica. Could not that city for almost half the year employ the is already an agency which will sign through bills by river and rail between these two points. Will not the Grand Trunk railread connect with this system.

Congress at its last session admitted Canadian goods to pass American custom-houses in bond. Why cannot this law bring in a hogshead of Havana sugar as well as a crate of Liverpool ware or a cask of Bordeaux brandy?

The New Orleans Republican in calling attention to the communication, said .

It tends to show the cities of the lakes and of Canada that their best route to the Havana, Panama, (Aspinwall) and Rio Janeiro. From the head of open water at Cairo three branch railroads now diverge to bi. Louis, Chicago and Detroit. These from tributaries of the Mississippi, never frozen and never dry, will concentrate the tropical trade of the lake and river cities inheard over their own lines, and by the port of New Orleans. These are outlets for the farmers of the West and lines by which they can communicate directly with the tropics.

Times says: The Detroit board of trade looks hope-R. W. Hawley, Esq., and the Hon. Wm.
M. Burwell, of this city, bearing on the subject at issue. It was shown that by railroads recently completed, the distance between New Orleans and Detroit can be traveled in fifty-seven hours. It is fur-thermore set forth that a line of travel and transportation has just been opened con-necting Detroit with the Mississippi at Cairo, which employs the Cairo and Vin-cennes, the Vincennes and Indianapolis, and the Wabash, Western and Toledo trade with New Orleans and the Southwest. From Cairo to Detroit via Chicago was scarcely much better than child. from New York to Detroit.

The Cairo and Vincennes read has remedied all these objections, and has estab-lished a line of communication which must always be the best for Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Lower Canada, because it is a direct line penetrating these States and connecting them with the Mississippi River at a point which is never embar-New Orleans by direct purchases, car- chorage, ried by our river tonnage to Cairo, and thus by the new rail route through the great railroad center, Indianapolis, to all

This new rail route further enhances our facilities of communication with New York, Philadelphia and Boston. Using the river to Cairo not only will minimum rates of freight be obtained on all heavy commodities, but shipments can be made daily, the shipper receiving his bill of la-ling every evening, and upon which he may realize as is customary, instead of weekly, as is now generally the case.
